

Writing Period 6

Through his appreciation/love to God, Patrick Henry proves that because God will help the colonists, the colonists should engage in war with Britain. Patrick Henry lets the audience know that "There is a God who presides over the destinies of nations, and who will raise up friends to fight our battles for us." (Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death). He lets the audience know that they aren't alone; moreover, he lets the colonists know that God will help fight, and/or even go to war for them.

This persuades the colonists to engage in war with Britain because the Almighty God will protect them. Since God is well loved by many, more people will trust God and go to war.

Through the use of Patrick Henry's speech, Patrick Henry proves that the colonists should go to war. In the text, he says, "But when shall we be stronger? Will it be the first week, or the next year? Will it be when we are totally disarmed, and when a British guard shall be stationed in every house?" Patrick Henry uses pathos by giving a feeling of frightfulness. If we are not ready by having arms, then Britain will have over. This feeling would want to make people want to act and defend themselves by starting the war. great point.
